

WELCOME TO: PLYMOUTH ARGYLE

Football was first played in Plymouth in 1888, but it was not until 1903 that the Argyle turned professional and joined the Southern League. Their first game was against Northampton, whom they defeated 2-0 at Home Park. They finished the season in 9th. position, Southampton winning the league and Kettering last. After several near misses Plymouth won the Southern League Championship for the first time in 1912/1913.

In 1920/21 Plymouth were one of the founder members of the Third Division South and finished the season in 5th. place. Two seasons later they started a spell of six years finishing runners up. When they did eventually gain promotion, in 1929/30, they did so in no uncertain manner, by winning 30 of their 42 matches, losing only 4 and gaining 62 points.

They remained in the Second Div. until 1949/50 when they finished 21st. and were relegated to the Third Division. They had been fighting a losing battle for several seasons, finishing in the bottom four for 4 successive seasons.

Only two seasons were spent in the lower division and it was back to the 2nd Division again, when they finished 4th. in their first season up. Three more seasons were spent in Division Two then relegation time came around again. In 1958/59 Plymouth were the first ever winners of the newly formed Division Three then they returned to Division Two again.

In 1949 Eric Bryant was signed by Plymouth from Yeovil. He played 11 times, scoring 4 goals, then he was transferred to Leyton Orient in 1951.

Way back in 1928 J. Logan came to Yeovil from the Argyle, after making 264 appearances in his 9 years at Home Park.
